It Was a Three Cent Stamp.
Governor Draper contributed $5,350 for campaign expenses and Eugene N. Ross, candidate for lieutenant governor, $1,757. It takes cash to make the political horse go to its limit in these days. Pemmican.
In the latest batch of entertaining gossip from great Gotham appears the news that that choice article, pemmican, has just been added to the already overcrowded menus of the most sumptuous hotels. Wearing of nightgowns' tongues, aided with plover's eggs, the gilded hautes of the palaces of high prices have bent their intense mental energies to the finding of some new dish that should be unique for the moment, and have found it in pemmican. Now the gorgeous restaurant that cannot fill an order of pemmican, "sautee" or merely sliced cold, is distinctly behind the procession. Pemmican is all right. It is not particularly good, but it is filling for the money. Its totality of powdered meat, raising, sugar and tallow ought to be of benefit to many New Yorkers of the sort who are now making a cult of it. Whether it shall become a popular food with the great average people depends as much upon the beef magnates who make it as upon the way it hits the public taste. For there is no doubt at all that if the meat trust men find pemmican is being eaten by the public generally, they will at once boost the price. That is their regular way of supplying a demand.—Boston Post.

Willie's Father Teaches Him.
A business man who lives on Locust street went home to dinner last evening and found a vacant chair at the table.
"Where's Willie?" he asked.
"William is upstairs in bed." The answer came with painful precision from the sad faced mother.
"Why, what's up?" Not ill, is he?
"It grieves me to say, Robert, that our son—your son—has been heard swearing on the street. I heard him!"
"Swearing? Scott! I'll teach him to swear!" And he started upstairs in the dark. Half way up he stumbled and came down on his chin on the top step.
When the atmosphere cleared a little, Willie's mother was saying sweetly from the hallway, "What will do, dear. You have given him enough for one lesson."

She Can Eat Pie Now.
A lady recently visited a friend in Keene, N. H., whose husband was very delicate, and yet she noticed that he could eat all the pie he wanted. She began to wonder how it was that he could do it, when she had to give up this delicacy because of disagreeable after effects. She writes as follows:
"I found it was because the pies were made with Cottole, and as I am a great lover of pie, I began using Cottole, and have never had a bit of lard in the house since that time. I can enjoy my pie, as it does not give heart-burn as formerly."

Cottole makes crisp, flaky, "digestible" pie-crust, that tastes good, and does good—lard does you harm.

CONGRESSMAN PERISHED IN FIRE

David A. DeArmond Made Vain Effort to Save Life of Grandson in Burning Home.

Kansas City, Mo., Nov. 23.—In a vain effort to save the life of his little grandson, David A. DeArmond of the Sixth Missouri district, perished in a fire that destroyed his home in Butler, Mo., early today.
His act of heroism became known late today when his body was found, the form of an announcement to section his little boy. He had caught up the six year old lad, David A. (Waddie) DeArmond, Jr., rushed with him through the flames that filled his room but had fallen unconscious with his burden and both sank through the floor to death.
The boy was his grandfather's idol. They were inseparable and often slept together. Last night the boy went to his grandfather's house as usual, and after a happy evening the two retired.

The next the family heard of them was early today when from behind the smoke and flames that enveloped the house the boy screamed: "Oh, grandpa, get me out of here quick! I'm burning to death!"
"Yes, son, don't be afraid. Grandpa will take you out," was the reply. Then both went down to their death.
The others of the family sleeping in the house at the time of the fire, Mrs. DeArmond, her daughter, Mrs. Clark, and a maid, Nettie Boles, escaped.
James A. DeArmond, editor of the Bates County Democrat, son of the congressman and father of the boy who burned to death, tried to rush in to the burning building to save them, but was prevented by others who knew his sacrifice would be in vain.

NEW DUTY OF SELECTMEN.

Latest Law Which Concerns Selling Liquor to Habitual Drunkards.
At the last session of the general assembly a new law was passed, in the form of an amendment to section 3636 of the general statutes, which is causing more interest as time progresses.

For some time past there has been a law in the general statute which provides that, when a man is a habitual drunkard, any member of the man's family may request the selectmen to notify the saloonkeepers of the town where the man resides not to sell him any intoxicants, and disobedience of this order is a punishable offense at law. This act has also been amended so that it may also apply to a woman.

Now comes this new act, found on page 1187, chapter 796 of the public acts of 1909.

The new acts provide that not only can the selectmen be called upon to notify the saloonkeepers, but on request the liquor prosecutor "shall" so notify all the saloonkeepers of the city or town.

So far, so good; but this new amendment does not make any provision for the payment of the costs of notification and the act of disobeying the orders of the selectmen is punishable, the new act provides no punishment for the disobedience of the orders of the prosecuting attorney.

In other words, the act is construed by some legal authorities, if Mrs. John Jones wants her husband to stop drinking, she visits the office of the prosecutor and demands that he notify every one of the saloon and saloonkeepers in this city not to sell any more intoxicants to John Jones, and the new law makes it mandatory that this be done.

Now the serving of notices is a costly affair, and the question arises, who is to pay for its being done? The law makes no provision for this. Supposing the prosecutor does notify about John Jones, and Earl Smith, a saloonkeeper, sells to John and is arrested, it is said that, even if guilty, it would be impossible to convict under the law, as there is no penalty. If the selectmen gave the notice there would be, however.

Business Men to Organize.
Between forty and fifty men gathered at the Old Saybrook town hall on Friday evening to hear Senator E. Hart Penn of Westerfield speak on the benefits of a business men's association. The address was much enjoyed by the audience and a vote of thanks was given the speaker. It was decided to form an association and Rev. Luther M. Strayer, William S. Clark, Ralph A. Black, Charles S. Gates and Frank S. Pratt were chosen a committee to draw up a constitution and by-laws.

Miss M. Emma Henry has a class of 200 men in a Coatesville Sunday school.

OWES HER LIFE TO

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Vienna, W. Va.—"I feel that I owe the last ten years of my life to Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. Eleven years ago I was a walking shadow. I had been under the doctor's care but got no relief. My husband persuaded me to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and it worked like a charm. It relieved all my pains and misery. I advise all suffering women to take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound." — MRS. EMMA WHEATON, Vienna, W. Va.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, made from native roots and herbs, contains no narcotics or harmful drugs, and to-day holds the record for the largest number of actual cures of female diseases of any similar medicine in the country, and thousands of voluntary testimonials are on file in the Pinkham laboratory at Lynn, Mass., from women who have been cured from almost every form of female complaints, inflammation, ulceration, displacements, fibroid tumors, irregularities, periodic pains, backache, indigestion and nervous prostration. Every such suffering woman owes it to herself to give Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a trial.
If you would like special advice about your case write a confidential letter to Mrs. Pinkham, at Lynn, Mass. Her advice is free and always helpful.

A MILFORD HERMIT.

Effort Being Made to Drive Him from Land He Now Occupies.
Effort is being made to oust Otto Hansen, the Milford hermit, from land situated on the Milford beach between Fort Trumbull Beach and Harrison Park. The hermit has occupied for the last 21 years a piece of land with a frontage of about 100 feet on his possible bar that leads over to Charles Island. The Connecticut Railway and Lighting company owns land adjoining and claim this land that is occupied by the hermit. They have brought action against Hansen and ask $600 damages and possession of the land.

Hansen claims that he has been on the land since the Statue of Liberty was erected in New York harbor, that at the time he took possession of it, it was not owned, and that when he built his house he had to build it on stilts, so near was it to the water's edge. The ground around it is practically all made ground, having been washed in by the sea.

The Man of Leisure.
Sage counsel, this, from Richard Olney in speaking about the proper kind of man for mayor of a city: "But my experience, gentlemen, is that when you find a man of leisure, a real man of leisure, as a rule you will find a man who is good for nothing but leisure. It is the hard working man, the man already seemingly full of engrossing occupation, who always manages to assume an additional load and carry it successfully. It is that sort of a man who will make the best mayor of Boston. His inducements will not be the political rewards, but the ambition and hope of successfully committing himself to a great work."

True, every word! If you want a thing well done, never seek the man who has time hanging heavy on his hands, but seek rather the man who seems to be too busy to take on anything more. That is almost the invariable experience. The man of leisure isn't trained to activity. The man who is constantly active is so. But one should not forget that it is just as bad to take the man whose "leisure" is not of the idle-rich variety. In cities like Lowell it is much more often the man of leisure who is only looking for an easy living— attracted to political office by the pecuniary rewards and the possible graft, rather than by its honors and brief authority. If the idle citizen who does not need to work for his living makes a poor executive as a rule, so is the man who doesn't work for his living but who needs to do so. The latter is too likely to be worse than inefficient—he is dangerous in the most positive way. Here then are two things to be avoided—the man of ample time and ample means, because he seldom knows how to work; also the man of ample time and meager resources, who not only doesn't know how to work but is anxious not to learn. The ideal executive is neither the idle-rich man nor the idle proletarian. Rather is he the active man of affairs, who is seemingly too occupied to have the time for the job. And in order to secure the services of such a man we have simply got to make a radical alteration in the methods of municipal politics, else we cannot get such for love or for money.—Lawell Courier-Citizen.

A State Song.
What, in Heaven's name, would Connecticut do with a state song? The agitation for one sounds humorous somewhat.—Journal-Courier.

There are times when silence is more musical than any song—as, for example, when Brother Hoenthal meets Brother Kendall on the field of prohibition strife.

But how could there be joy in North Haven if there were no songs? How could Col. Bob Eaton and Representative Chandler properly describe the lobby if they could not sing?

We do not forget that both Col. Eaton and Brother Chandler have "learned in suffering what they teach in song," to quote the immortal words of Shelly, but why not let them sing and why deprive them of the chance to sing a state song?

There are songs which have no tongue and songs which have too much tongue, but why should this state, with many singers, be without a single song?

Only this week the papers told of the meeting of John Henry, Bob and George, and the magic of their song. They met in Hartford, but they had to go beyond the state to find their song.

The home market spirit needs cultivation in Connecticut.
We beg to remind Grandmother Courier that all Connecticut singing is not done by the cat.—New Haven Leader.

Thanksgiving Proclamation.
The first Thanksgiving proclamation of a president or a governor is always regarded with special interest. There have been executives whose non-religious attitude has made the issuing of such proclamations something of a joke. There have been executives who have played a joke in issuing them, as in the case of Ben Butler when governor of Massachusetts. He borrowed without credit the forgotten proclamation of an old time worthy and had the laugh on those who criticized it, as they were criticizing an excellent governor of the past. President Taft's first proclamation is a model of its kind. It breathes the reverent spirit; it is simple and direct in its language; it is not over long and yet it does not dismiss the subject conventionally or curtly. Its close is characteristic of the president in spirit and in style, the words in which he says that the blessings of returning prosperity "animate a cheerful and resolute people to all the renewed energies of beneficent industry and material and moral progress. It is altogether fitting that we should humbly and gratefully acknowledge the divine source of these blessings." The president is to be congratulated on the felicitous discharge of a not always easy task.—Waterbury American.

Mrs. Uraula Leuer, mother of Jacob Leuer, president of the board of public service, Sandusky, O., celebrated her 83d-birthday anniversary by donating several walises.
